Even Walt Disney was inspired by its fairytale architecture, that he used it to create Cinderella's castle in the 1950 cartoon film. The Neuschwanstein Castle is also used as inspiration for the recognizable Disney logo, the Cinderella Castle in Disneyworld Florida and the Sleeping Beauty Castle in Disneyland Paris.

The setting of Neuschwanstein could not be more idyllic. It is a spectacular castle with an amazing 6000 M² interior and about 200 hundred rooms of which only some can be seen on a guided tour. The castle construction began in 1869 by King Ludwig II of Bavaria and it took many years to build. King Ludwig built his own fairytale castle to compensate for the loss of power. After the king had lost its sovereign power to the Prussian Empire he looked for ways to reaffirm his royalty by building castles and palaces in which he truly felt like a king. Unfortunately he never got to see his castle finished before he died.
